Building or renovating a house? Here's how to find the right

Architect

ach architect has an individual style, approach to design, and method of working. So it's important to find an architect who is compatible with your personal style and needs. To help in your search, follow these fews steps to success.

Build a list of possibilities. Ask around. Find out who designed projects in your community that you like. Get recommendations from friends, relatives, and acquaintances who have worked with architects. Check to see if the architect is a member of the American Institute of Architects (AIA). Membership in the AIA means that the architect subscribes to a high professional purpose to advance standards of practice and service to society. This includes having a code of ethics and access to a variety of professional and technical resources.

Contact your local AIA chapter. Many have lists of member-owned firms that are interested in doing various types of projects. The most complete statewide list is published in this directory, but you can also search for firms on the internet at www.aia.org.

Call each firm on your list. Describe your project and ask the architects if they are available to accomplish it. If so, request literature that outlines the firm's qualifications and experience. If the office is unable to handle your project, ask if they can recommend another firm.

Interview each firm. Interviewing a firm gives you a chance to meet the people who will design your project and to learn if the chemistry between you is right. You may be working with your architect for a long time, so choose someone with whom you feel comfortable. Allow at least an hour for the interview, preferably at the architect's office where you can see where the work will be done. Some architects charge for the interview, so ask if there is a fee involved with the consultation.

Ask questions. How busy is the firm? Does it have the capacity to take on your work? Who will handle the job? Insist on meeting the person who will actually design your project. What is the firm's design philosophy? Talk about a project budget and the range of fees that the architect would anticipate for your project. Before you select an architect, ask to be taken to at least one completed project. Also ask for references from past clients. These are invaluable. In addition, you might want to obtain an Architect's Qualifications Statement (form B431) from the Virginia Society AIA offices. This standardized document may be used to verify an architect's credentials and other information prior to selecting an architect for a project.

Making the final cut. Unlike buying a new car or new appliance, you can't see the product and test it out. The architect provides a professional service, not a product. The right architect will be the one who can provide the judgment, technical expertise, and creative skills – at a reasonable cost – to help you realize a project that fits your practical needs as well as your dreams.

This brief introduction was excerpted from "Home Delivery," a guide to how an AIA architect can help you realize your dream home. Copies of the publication can be requested by calling the Virginia Society AIA at 804-644-3041.

2001 Design Awards

welve projects by architects in the region were honored in 2001 with Awards for Excellence in Architecture. The winners, selected from a field of 120 submissions representing the state's five AIA chapters, ranged from a modest residential addition to a monumental cultural center dedicated to the life and work of Pope John Paul II. The award-winning projects were selected by a seven-member panel of leading architects from the Raleigh/Durham/Chapel Hill area in North Carolina. Frank Harmon, FAIA, chaired the awards jury.

Richmond Ballet BCWH (formerly Bond Comet

Westmoreland + Hiner)

The conceptual theme "the ballet factory" informed this renovation of a four-story industrial warehouse. To contrast the solidity of the existing concrete and masonry structure, a new lighter steel-and-glass structure was designed to literally hang off the existing concrete frame. The renovation opens the studios to views of the James River and Richmond's downtown. "We liked this project because the original building had not been lost in the addition, which is so often the case. Here the addition complemented the original factory-type building," the jury commented. "The corner studio space, in particular, is really quite beautiful."

Owner: Richmond Ballet
Contractor: BEERS/Heyward and Lee

12

Pope John Paul II Cultural Center Leo A. Daly

Dramatic forms inspired by those found in traditional church architecture come together to create this new education and cultural center. A varied palette of materials reflects and captures the natural light, with combinations of clear, colored, and sandblasted glass panels that manipulate daylight and transform the building at night into a glowing lantern. "Compositionally, there are some gorgeous moves in this project," the jury said. "The materials really help to reinforce a sense of permanence, with the stone base, copper cladding, and plaster work."

The Pope John Paul II Cultural Center Owner: Contractor: James G. Davis Construction Corp.

Greenville Residence SMBW Architects

This unbuilt project conceives of a quiet residence that melts into a valley between the Allegheny and Blue Ridge Mountains. Arranged around an overscaled stone wall, the interior and exterior spaces are oriented toward broad views of the mountains from a house assembled using regional materials and techniques. "It's very sophisticated," noted the jury. "It has a great level of resolution and confidence. There's a richness of texture, but there's not a lot of extraneous stuff at the same time."

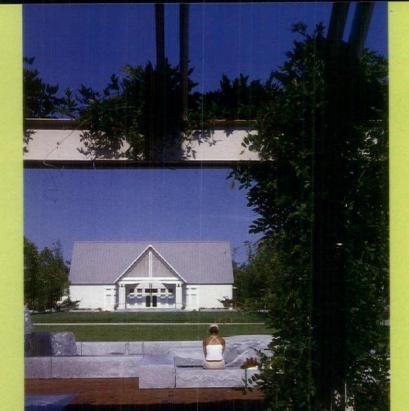

Client: David Fisher

Unitarian Universalist Church James William Ritter Architect

The design of this unbuilt church stemmed from the modest budget and the generous size of the Shenandoah Valley site. A modern, open roof allows light to flow into the sanctuary, which stands across the sweeping curved terrace from the dramatic spire. Noted the jury: "It's an absolutely beautiful plan - clear and straightforward. It essentially sets up a wall of repetitive spaces, which are played against the classrooms that form the bar. It has an economy about it, trying to make something bigger than it really is. And it is skillfully done."

Client: Unitarian Universalist Church of the Shenandoah Valley

Northington Green Carlton Abbott and Partners

The architects created a unifying public space in Williamsburg that connects the town hall, library, police station, and post office to each other and to the historic landscape. Vines clamber over a trellis that incorporates the original wall of an old fire station, while brick walks and walls weave between greens, trees, a water screen, and buildings that respond to the historical context. "We respect this project because it took a suburban edge site, which was basically a mess, and gave it some sense of order and delight," said the jury. "The green spaces are just as important as the architecture. Without them, this wouldn't have been anywhere near as successful."

Owner: City of Williamsburg Contractor: S.B. Ballard Construction Co.

Wilson/Glazier Residence BMK, P.C.

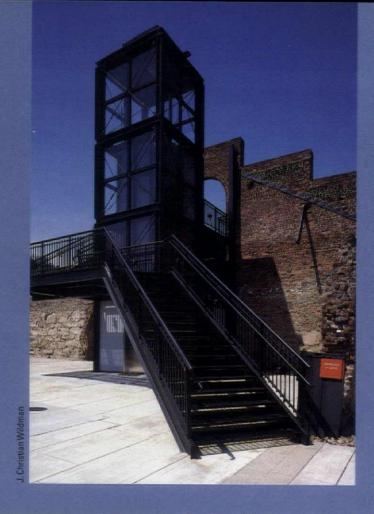

The original "California Contemporary" style of this 1960s house was seamlessly extended to create a design that turned the deck into a greenhouse, the carport into a garage, and the front door into a striking sheltered entrance. The architect enclosed the former deck in long panels of glass and warm wood paneling, capping it with an angled overhanging roof. "We admired this project because it had very little to work with in terms of functional program and it does it with confidence, producing a very nice addition to the building. It has grace. There's a great deal of care in it."

Judy Wilson and Stephen Glazier Owners:

Contractor: Danish Builders

Exterior Elevator and Stair Glave & Holmes Associates

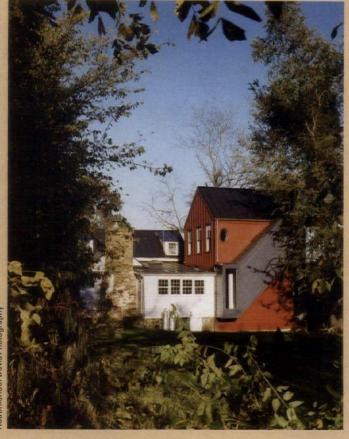

This industrial ruin, now the site of the Richmond Civil War Center at Tredegar Ironworks, stands by the James River in Richmond. The architects designed the steel elevator and stair to reflect the original metalwork of the site, allowing visitors to weave in and out of the remaining brick walls without obstructing views of the river. "We very much liked this scheme – the clarity of the idea of the steel constructions and the vertical and horizontal circulation weaving its way through the ruins of this old loadbearing masonry wall," the jury said. "In the end, the clarity of the idea and consistency of treatment prevailed."

Owners: Richmond Riverfront Development

Farmhouse Addition Robert M. Gurney Architect

Rather than mimicking the original white, Federal style farmhouse, the architect created a marked contrast with the color and modern lines of his addition to a Lovettsville residence. The forms and proportions establish ties to the original, but the addition's gray metal, redpainted wood, floor-to-ceiling windows, and modern interior touches proclaim its contemporary nature. "We thought the plan moves were ingenious, in which you have a private stair up to the master suite by taking it out of the interior of the house, thus creating a nice living room," the jury said. "There is an interesting contrast between the quirky exterior of the house and the inside, which is almost Shakerlike in character."

Owners: David and Marcie Finnell
Contractor: Foster/Herz.Inc.

loachlander Davis Photograp

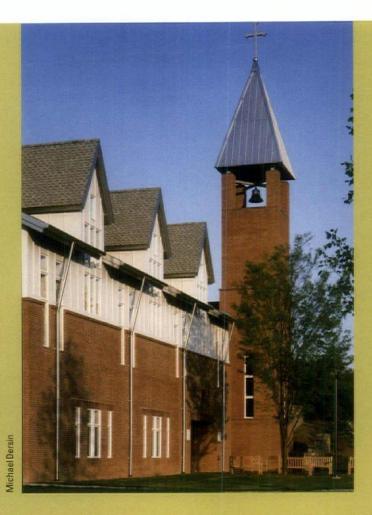

1779 Church Street David Jameson Architect

Transforming a neglected 1890 rowhouse in Washington, D.C., into a spacious, well-lit living space proved a dynamic exercise. A two-story light shaft/stairwell draws light into public areas, while the birch cabinetry defines space in the living areas downstairs and hangs suspended in the stairwell. The textures of the materials, from handrubbed plaster walls to the dark steel stairway, emphasize the natural light that flows through the house. "We liked the organization of the space and resolution of details," the jury remarked. "The major effort is the stairway, a well crafted piece of sculpture."

Owner: Jason Davis Contractor: Henry Lopez

Our Lady of the Visitation Church Kerns Group Architects

Situated in Darnestown, Md., this rural church incorporates the materials and shapes of the local architecture. A rhythmic series of dormers shoots skyward, mimicking the spire of the bell tower, while on the inside, the dormers appear to have been carved from the ceiling, creating more skyward motion and infusing the sanctuary with light. "Of all the church spaces we saw, it seemed the most serene and beautiful and unfussy," the jury said. "We also appreciated the breaking down of the scale of the exterior walls with the white batten above the red brick."

Owner: The Archdiocese of Washington Contractor: Corning Construction Co.

Goodview Elementary School Spectrum Design, P.C.

This Bedford County elementary school is organized for flexibility. Classrooms are arranged in three wings so that students of similar age can be grouped for effective instruction, and selected classrooms can be shared to accommodate changes in enrollment. The school is expandable to suit a growing student body, designed to provide security while allowing access for after-school events, and wired for the digital age. "It has a certain quietness and refinement to it that made it the best school project we saw," the jury said. "The interiors are very serene, with little splashes of color. It shows a great deal of restraint."

Owner: Bedford County Public Schools

Contractor: Blair Construction

Huis JCMZ Studio27 Architecture

The design for the planned renovations to this 3,000-square-foot brick colonial will not only add 1,400 square feet of functional space, but will also transform the residence into a modern pavilion. Every aspect of the house adds to the aesthetic dialogue, creating a rigorous exercise in aluminum, glass, steel, maple, and cherry veneer. "We liked this one because of the boldness with which it took a traditional building and turned it into a memorable modern building," the jury noted. "In all, it's a clear resolution of a plan."

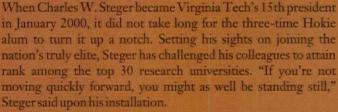

Owner: Johannes C.M. Zutt
Contractor: Glass Construction Co.

The William C. Noland Medal

Charles W. Steger, Ph.D., FAIA

Likewise, current state funding cuts of historic proportions have not slowed Steger's speed nor dampened his resolve. "Virginia Tech intends to make progress despite the budget reductions and we will be well positioned to move quickly once the crisis passes," he said in a letter to the university community.

Steger's impressive range of achievements as a Virginia Tech administrator and his many contributions to the education of thousands of architects in the region contributed to his being honored in 2001 with the William C. Noland Medal, the highest honor an architect can receive from the Virginia Society AIA. The award was presented at the Visions for Architecture celebration held last November at the Branch House in Richmond.

The signature initiative of Steger's administration likely will be the Virginia Bioinformatics Institute, a new interdisciplinary research center formed by the convergence of computer science and biological research. Populated by world class researchers, the institute already has built a contract base of more than $20 million. Harnessing and manipulating huge arrays of data, the institute studies molecular, cellular, and environmental interactions that affect human health, agricultural systems, and the environment. Other recent initiatives led by the Richmond native include the formation of the World Institute for Disaster Risk Management, a partnership with the Swiss Federal Institutes of Technology.

A registered architect and former dean of Tech's College of Architecture and Urban Studies, Steger was the architect of a different sort as the leader of the university's successful fundraising campaign in the late 1990s. Under his guidance as vice president for development and university relations, the Campaign for Virginia Tech raised $337 million, exceeding the goal by 35 percent. It was the most successful fundraising effort in Tech's history, with more than 71,000 donors participating.

Steger's record of unique accomplishment reveals a visionary thinker with concrete achievements. He is directly responsible for the creation of the Center for European Studies and Architecture in Switzerland and the Washington-Alexandria Architecture Center just outside the nation's capital, both of which in combination established a national and international presence for the College of Architecture and Urban Studies and enhanced the university's presence.

Steger's ties to Virginia Tech span four decades. He has been a student, faculty member, academic department head, college dean, and vice president before assuming the president's role.

Noland Medalists

While a faculty member, he won two teaching excellence awards. He authored a portion of a textbook that has been adopted by 230 universities. When he became dean of the College of Architecture and Urban Studies in 1981, Steger was the youngest dean of any college of architecture in America. During his 12-year tenure in that role, degree programs in public administration and urban affairs were consolidated from across the university into the college, and several new degrees were established. For his contributions to architectural education and research, he was inducted into the AIA College of Fellows in 1990, and received the Distinguished Achievement Award of the Virginia Society AIA in 1996.

Steger has served on several national research policy

Steger has served on several national research policy committees for both the AIA and the Association of Collegiate Schools of Architecture, as well as on an advisory panel for the Carnegie Commission on Science. He served as a reviewer for organizations that range from the National Science Foundation to the Middle Eastern Jordanian Journal of Town Planning. Under his leadership as dean, the college's research program grew threefold to become one of the largest research programs of any architecture school in the country.

In support of the university's extension and outreach mission, Steger's principal contributions occurred in the role of acting vice president for public service, a position he held concurrently during part of his tenure as dean. This office was responsible for all continuing education activities and facilities, as well as economic development initiatives of the university. During that period, continuing education was restructured and experienced a financial turnaround, generating profits rather than losses. Public policy forums were conducted around the state to establish Virginia Tech's role in facilitating discourse on key public policy issues. A new magazine, Virginia Issues and Answers, was begun. Today it enjoys a growing audience of legislators, state and local government officials, and economic developers in addition to academicians.

Steger has played an active role in shaping the future of the university. He chaired the Committee on Strategic Planning, which developed the institution's strategic processes, and was a member of the committee that developed the first core curriculum for Virginia Tech in 1981. In 1989, he chaired the University Committee on the Impact of Digital Technologies on the Teaching-Learning Environment. This report was lauded by the State Council of Higher Education for Virginia and is regarded as a seminal work in the field that underpins many instructional technology efforts.

Steger has been appointed by two Virginia governors to serve on study commissions and work groups, most recently the Governor's Commission on Population Growth and Development. He also is a past member of the Board of Trustees of Hollins University. He currently serves as president of the Endowment Foundation for the Western Virginia Foundation for the Arts and Sciences in Roanoke. Steger also is a director of the Boswil Foundation in Zurich, Switzerland.

The Architecture Medal for Virginia Service Lora M. Robins

Lora Robins believes in helping others. She appreciates places and buildings. Together these perspectives have compelled her to assist Virginia's educational and cultural institutions in projects designed to educate citizens, preserve Virginia's heritage, and celebrate the Commonwealth's cultural and natural resources. Thanks to Lora Robins's generosity, the University of Richmond, the American Red Cross, the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, and Lewis Ginter Botanical Garden all have been able to extend their offerings to Virginians.

A lover of gardens, Robins has long supported Lewis Ginter Botanical Garden as a board member. Instrumental in the early development of plans for its expansion, she contributed time from the inception, reviewing concepts for a comprehensive master plan. She also donated significant resources to the building of several gardens, the Robins Tea House, the E. Claiborne Robins Visitors Center, and the Garden's library/education complex.

Robins and her late husband, E. Claiborne Robins, also have made major gifts supporting the longevity and enhancement of the University of Richmond since 1969. Their stipulation that the university continue its Collegiate Gothic style has created a powerful sense of place that attracts students to the school. Buildings they helped to fund cover the campus, and the Lora Robins Gallery of Design from Nature showcases her personal collecting efforts in the university's first museum.

From nature's artistry in plants and flowers, to the sculptures that will grace the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts' newly endowed sculpture garden, to the dozens of paintings donated to the Virginia Historical Society, Lora M. Robins has shared her lifelong interest in beautiful works with the Richmond and Virginia community.

T. David Fitz-Gibbon Architecture Firm Award Kerns Group Architects

Well known and highly respected for its ecclesiastical projects, Kerns Group Architects, of Arlington, has garnered 50 design awards in half as many years, including nine from the Virginia Society AIA. A design ethic pervades every aspect of the firm's operation, from marketing to design to production to client relations. Kerns Group is also known for how it treats its own. An independent practitioner who trained in the firm said that Kerns Group "developed a kind of design sensibility in which there was no attempt to forge an office style, but rather to sharpen the emerging skills of enthusiastic young architects."

Describing Kerns Group's work, Washington Post critic Benjamin Forgey noted, "Formal innovation is combined with an awareness of historic precedent and an astute evaluation of a particular context." Forgey added that the firm's goal seems always "to make architecture that surprises, pleases and contributes to its community in as many ways as possible." Members of the firm donate their time to the community as well, showing that architects can bring problem-solving abilities to the benefit of others.

Test of Time Award Walter and Inger Rice Residence

Richmond's only International Style residence sits high atop the north bank of the James River, taking full advantage of its exceptional site. Architect Richard Neutra wedged the house beside massive boulders that push from the ground in front of the house, creating a contrast with its rigid geometry. Impressed with Neutra's successes in integrating human needs with the natural environment, the Rices selected him to design their home in the early 1960s. Neutra's signature motifs – dramatic cantilevers, expansive walls of glass, interconnected interior and exterior spaces, and the use of shallow pools of water to define edges – all find use in this one-of-a-kind house.

TILT-UP CONSTRUCTION For School Buildings & Additions

Photos by Tilt-Up Concrete Association

rchitects are creating beautiful, nctional and spacious school cilities using tilt-up construction, alizing significant cost and time avings over traditional methods.

Tilt-up construction is flexible. durable and safe with considerable long-term operating efficiencies in energy and maintenance costs.

Circle 101 on reader service card

Speedy Construction: Schools have been built "from the ground up" in four months using tilt-up.

Design Freedom: Diverse floor plans and exterior designs offer great flexibility.

Durability: Vandalism and costly maintenance are minimized.

Safety: Studies prove concrete outlasts other materials exposed to fire, remaining structurally sound for as much as 4 hours.

Quiet: Concrete's sound absorbing qualities mean quieter classrooms.

Energy Efficient: Reduced energy costs with concrete's heat-sinking properties and intregal insulation.

Spacious: Unobstructed "open" halls, classrooms, and gymnasiums.

Cost Effective: Lower material and labor costs help deliver quality buildings at a reduced investment.

Distinguished Achievement Award

Daniel R. Bairley, AIA

Teaching architecture seems to have become a second career for Dan Bairley, who practices architecture from his office in Alexandria. For more than three decades, he has instilled an appreciation for architecture in students, the public, and his peers. And Bairley has freely given time to help prepare interns for the Architecture Registration Examination. For those times when he could not teach in person, he has produced a workbook that has been a popular seller for years at the National Building Museum.

William A. Edgerton, AIA

A leader in sustainable design, Bill Edgerton has served on the President's Council on Sustainable Development and currently serves on the U.S. Green Building Council and the AIA Committee on the Environment. As a member of the latter, he chaired the Materials and Finishes Team for the "Greening of the White House" initiative in 1993, and contributed a section to the AIA's Environmental Resource Guide. His architectural practice during the last 20 years has focused on sustainability, including wide use of solar energy and ecologically sensitive planning.

Robert L. Vickery, FAIA

Robert Vickery's Concepts of Architecture initiated the education of more than 3,000 students at the University of Virginia over the course of a quarter-century, and earned national recognition. But Vickery's achievements are not in education alone. He founded the firm now known as VMDO Architects of Charlottesville in 1976, focusing on school and university buildings, many of which garnered chapter and state design awards. Since his retirement in 1997, Vickery has published his third book (Learning from the Lawn), lectured in Japan, and written a curriculum for Morgan State University. He continues to work on design projects, as well.

The Award for Preservation

A. Howe Todd

The caring guidance of Richmond native Howe Todd led to the preservation of the historic fabric of the city's downtown, and continues to refocus development and cultural attention on the area. Working his way from draftsman to planner to Richmond's assistant city manager, Todd over four decades influenced major initiatives ranging from annexation to floodwall construction. As an enthusiastic endorser wrote, "Howe was the City's one-man walking economic development office before the City had even identified the need for such a thing."

THE PARTY NAMED IN COLUMN TO THE PARTY NAMED

Edward A. Chappell

Ed Chappell takes to heart the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation's motto: That the future may learn from the past. From his position as the director of architectural research, he is responsible for leading the research on and preservation of the foundation's 550-plus buildings. Chappell is recognized as a leading architectural historian in 18th-century Virginia and American architecture. His major accomplishments include the reconstruction of Public Hospital, the redesign of Shields Tavern, the restoration of the Peyton Randolph House and reconstruction of its outbuildings, and the restoration of the Williamsburg-James City County Courthouse.

Benjamin Forgey

Some wags think architecture is elitist and out of touch with today's world. Architecture critic Ben Forgey debunks that idea with clear, insightful reviews that force people to recognize architecture's importance in their lives. From memorials to a wronged people to a community's efforts to change the way their neighborhood grows, the subjects of Forgey's articles in The Washington Post have helped raise public support for high-quality architecture, urban design, and planning. For 20 years his "Cityscape" column has supported design excellence with perceptive criticism. His writing also appears in national publications such as Architecture and Metropolis, and he has served on awards juries nationwide.

William D. Rieley

Will Rieley is one of Virginia's most accomplished landscape architects specializing in historic sites and garden restoration. His Charlottesville firm, Rieley and Associates, has consulted on several projects for Monticello, including the design of a scenic parkway entrance now under construction. The firm also has worked at Jamestown, Montpelier, and Poplar Forest in Virginia, the Vanderbilt Mansion National Historic Site in New York, and Acadia National Park in Maine, for which the firm received recognition nationally from the American Society of Landscape Architects. Working for the Garden Club of Virginia, Rieley recently completed work on the Virginia Executive Mansion Garden, Bruton Parish Churchyard, and Lee Hall in Newport News.

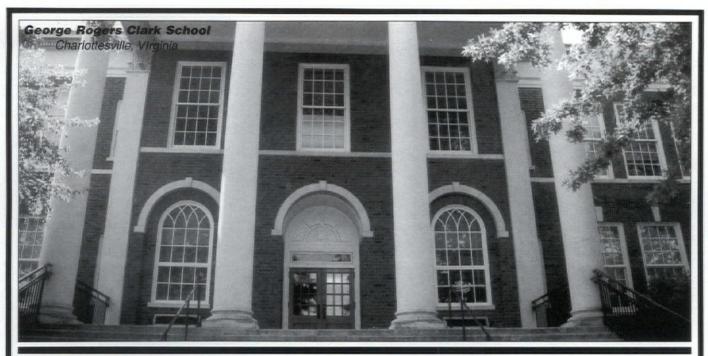

Honorary Membership

The Honorable John C. Watkins

On the eve of his third decade in service to the Commonwealth, John Watkins can look back on a career of many accomplishments. The Virginia Senator's efforts in the General Assembly have positively influenced the professions of architecture and landscape architecture. Watkins has created legislation that improved the Commonwealth's built environment through his service on a variety of committees, reflecting his commitment to bettering the quality of life through regional cooperation. Currently, he co-chairs the Growth and Economic Development Commission, which is charged with identifying issues with the greatest chance for consensus and moving them forward. From this group's work, the Commonwealth will base its actions on growth and community planning.

How to Use This

Directory

FIRST

If you are trying to locate architects in a particular area, but don't know the firm by name, look in the index that begins on page 67. That is organized by city and town.

SECOND

If you know the name of the firm you are trying to locate, simply thumb through the following pages and find the name listed alphabetically in the directory.

THIRD

Here's what you will find under the firm listing.

- Name, address, and phone number.
- Principals and firm personnel

If you want to talk about a possible commission, ask for the person listed as "client contact." If you want to talk to the firm about using a new productor service, ask for the person listed as "vendor contact." In smaller firms, these contacts will be the same person.

Principal areas of practice

While architects pride themselves on being generalists, many firms develop particular strengths over the years. This listing includes the four most important areas of a firm's practice, though other project types aren't necessarily excluded from the range of work a firm is qualified to do.

Recent projects

We have limited each firm to naming no more than five of their recent completed buildings. Take note: Many of the buildings may have been recognized for design excellence or other attributes. If you are considering hiring this firm, go take a look at some of the buildings first and ask the building owners about their level of satisfaction with the results.

LAST

A few words about this directory. Contained here are the architecture firms which have a member of the Virginia Society AIA as a principal. There may be other principals and employees at the firm whose names are not listed. The information published here is provided by the firms and we assume it to be accurate, though we do not assume liability for its accuracy.
